

The above photograph was taken in 1998 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows the video tape recorders, audio mixers, waveform monitor, video monitors, a time base corrector, modulators to transmit programming to the Headend, and associated equipment used for playback and control of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows the video tape recorders, audio mixers, waveform monitor, video monitors, time base correctors, modulators to transmit programming to the Headend, and associated equipment used for playback and control of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows another view of the video tape recorders, audio mixers, waveform monitor, video monitors, time base correctors, modulators to transmit programming to the Headend, and associated equipment used for playback and control of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows a closer view of the video tape recorders and some associated equipment used for playback and control of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows a closer view of the video tape recorders, waveform monitor, video monitors, audio monitor, and some associated equipment used for playback and control of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows a closer view of an SVHS video tape recorder used for playback of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows a closer view of a video tape recorder, a time base corrector, waveform monitor, video monitors, audio monitor, and some associated equipment used for playback and control of programming on the two Public Access Channels.

The above photograph was taken in 1998 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows the computer based equipment used to produce the alpha-numeric information programming on one channel.

The above photograph was taken October 29, 1999 at the Public Access Playback Master Control programming facility located in the YMCA building at 1325 W Street, NW. It shows the computer based equipment used to produce the alpha-numeric information programming on the two Public Access Channels.